

'stage@leeds Unmasked' is a two week festival running from 29th February to 15th March featuring leading professional touring theatre companies and performances from University of Leeds students as well as lectures and workshops.

29th February-1st March

'New Stages' conference will celebrate the creative work of post-graduates (art, music, writing and performance) with keynotes from high profile industry speakers including Diederick Santer, executive producer of Eastenders and Jane Featherstone from BBC's Spooks and Hustle and Eric Poettschacher, founder of Shapeshifters.

3rd March

SAA-UK (South Asian Arts) Workshops combining dance and music (this event is open to staff and students only)

4th March

Mark Byford, Leeds graduate and deputy director-general from the BBC will give a lecture on 'News at When? - Broadcast Journalism in the Digital Age'

6th March

Seinendan will perform 'From 'S' Plateau' in a rare chance to see this renowned Japanese theatre company on British soil

7th March

'The Eagle has Landed', performed by Fool's Proof Theatre Company, a moving and humorous story about memory and one man's search for his long-lost brother

8th March

Red Shift Theatre Company will bring from London their acclaimed production of Shakespeare's 'Much Ado About Nothing' set in war-torn Sarajevo

9th March

PCI! Performance and Cultural Impact - an eclectic and energetic showcase from undergraduates in the School of Performance and Cultural Industries

10th March

'We are Leeds University Union' - performance and music societies within the LUU will take centre stage to showcase work from their sell-out shows

11th March

Spike Theatre will present 'Gin and Tonic and Passing Trains', an evening of dark humour and mad cap fun based on Charles Dickens' ghost story 'The Signalman'

13th March

Contemporary dance company, Vincent Dance, will perform their compelling and powerful new work 'Act One'

14th-15th March

'Off the Beat' - an exhilarating student performance fusing dance and music improvised from everyday objects
